Abstract (en)

An apparatus for performing exercise has two training stations which are fixedly attachable to each other. Each training station has a mounting frame (1) with a seat (2) or rest and a weight stack mechanism (3) with a weight belt (6) and a pulley mechanism adapted for a specific muscle exercising purpose. When the training stations are attached to each other the weight stacks are positioned in parallel and adjacent to each other and the weights aligned to be selectable as independent weight packs for each training station or as a common weight pack for team training. The pulley mechanism of each training station is equipped with a safety pulley assembly (15). The advantages are the possibility for team training, which is believed to be more motivating, a simple and safe design and easy conversion between single station mode and team station mode. <IMAGE>
