Abstract (en)

[origin: US4189057A] The invention relates to a device for packaging liquid comprising two coupled bottles mounted on a common base. The two bottles are clipped on the base by means of two tongues on said base between which are inserted said bottles, a locking bead being provided on the inner face of each tongue and cooperating with a recess provided on the adjacent face of each bottle; two guide ribs are provided on said inner face of each tongue to cooperate, each, with a groove of corresponding section provided on the adjacent face of a corresponding bottle. The invention is more particularly applicable to the packaging of perfume.
