Abstract (en)
A nursing bottle for location around a person's neck whereby a baby cradled in one arm of the person can be comfortably fed from a bottle positioned in the holder, leaving the other arm of the person free. The bottle holder includes a halter member (2) and support means (8, 17, 25, 26, 34, 36) mounted on one end of the halter member for gripping therein the bottle, the support means being freely rotatable on the halter member in a substantially horizontal plane to permit the bottle to follow any side-to-side movements of the baby's head. The support means is also pivotable in a generally vertical plane against an adjustable frictional resistance whereby the bottle can be retained as desired in a retracted, inoperative position to enable winding and the like of the baby.
