Abstract (en)

A key (26) comprises a resistor (R40) of a predetermined value which can be connected to a socket (S) of an electronic lock, where it forms a divider with a resistor (R29). A window comparator (A2, A3) determines whether or not a resistor in a certain range around the predetermined value has been connected and provides a signal accordingly. This lock and key is used to arm and disarm an intruder alarm in which changes in signal from an ultrasonic transmitter (U1) to an ultrasonic receiver (U2) caused by the presence of an intruder are detected.
