Abstract (en)
A bandolier (30) of flexible plastics ties (10) for supply to an automatic tie gun to effect tying of a roll or bundle, the ties being held in parallel arrangement in the bandolier by integral bridging pieces (32) with buckles or apertured heads (12) along one edge of the bandolier and the ends of the tails (14) of the ties along the other edge. The buckles (12) may be apertured parallel or transversely to the length of the tie, to suit the type of gun being fed. A preferred embodiment of bandolier is incorporated in a magazine having a mouth shaped to bend the tie as it enters the gun so that the apertured buckle is correctly orientated.
