Abstract (en)

[origin: CA1170143A] Disclosed is a pre-payment machine comprising a strong-box intended for temporarily storing coins introduced into the machine prior to their collection by means of a connected collection device, this strong-box being especially designed in order to be protected against break-ins. The strong-box is made up of two sections the first being a bottom which forms an integral part of the housing itself of the machine and has a collection aperture usually closed by a seal and the other being a lid bolted onto the bottom by bolting means controlled by the seal. The seal can only be manoeuvred in the open position by coupling the collection device with the housing of the machine.
