Abstract (en)

A wall is built up of wall panels (3-8), joint units (11, 12) and other wall units (9, 10) for example, each wall unit being cast from appropriate material and provided over its face side with a relief simulating irregular stones having raised pointing therebetween. At least one edge of each panel (3-8) has an irregular contour at the face side, simulating the boundaries of adjacent stone, for engaging a complementarily contoured edge of another panel (3-8) or unit (9-12). The contoured edge of one or other of the joined units (3-12) is bounded by a raised ridge simulating pointing.
