Abstract (en)
A correcting device for use, for example, for masking and allowing overprinting of errors on a typescript or the like is disclosed comprising a light-transmitting backing release sheet (10), with areas of masking material (12) carried on one face of the backing release sheet (10), the release sheet being of larger overall area than the overall area of said masking material (12). Each area of masking material (12) is adhesive, under pressure, on its face remote from the backing sheet (10), whereby by placing the release sheet over an area of a receiving sheet of which an area is to be masked, so that the masking material is disposed between the release sheet and the receiving sheet, and applying pressure over the area of the masking material on the face of the release sheet remote from the masking material, the area of masking material can be transferred to the receiving sheet.
