Abstract (en)

A hairdressing aid is described comprising a perforated strip (16) which forms part of or is secured or securable to a sheet, sleeve or bag (10) into which hair pulled through the apertures (20) can be wrapped after it has been treated with dye or like colouring material. The perforated strip is adapted to be secured to the hair by using clips (12) over a region of the scalp in which part of the hair is to be dyed and after the hair has been pulled through the perforations and dyed the hair and sheet, sleeve or bag is rolled up and secured, possibly by the same clips (12), to retain the hair in the package whilst the dye is processing. The strip may be formed by folding over thin sheet material and secured to form a two or more ply thickness. Alternatively, double-sided tape may be employed with the exposed surface of the tape which adjoins the tape to the edge of the sheet material. Preferred material for both strip and sheet, sleeve or bag, is polythene.
