Abstract (en)

The rectangular cardboard box is intended for packing objects of different sizes, but particularly for packing paper sheets of different formats. It is folded from a pre-cut blank whose fold lines are arranged such that vertical columns (32-35) can be provided in at least two corners (18-21). These columns are pref. integral with the respective sides (7-10) and may extend over the full box height or part thereof. Insert panels (54) may be placed between two columns. Each column may consist of flaps interconnected via fold lines parallel to the fold joining it to a side. FL
