Abstract (en)

A buckle plate (8 or 9), for use in a machine which manipulates i.e. folds or deflects sheets of paper, cardboard or the like, comprises a rectangular frame (81) having a multiplicity of pairs of transversely extending guide members (84) between which a sheet slides. A carrier (88) extending transversely of the guide members supports a plurality of sheet control members (89) in spaces between the guide members so that the control members can be moved between a first position in which they form deflecting surfaces for deflecting a sheet and a second position in which they act as stop members for locating a sheet to be folded. The second position is adjustable in accordance with the size of the sheet and the position of the fold. The carrier is slidably mounted in the frame so that the control members can be moved in unison between the first and second positions.
