Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0119971A2] The grill for fitting in a window frame, in order to keep out intruders consists of a number of separate bars. Each bar is made from two channel sections (1,2) joined together to make a box section. The bar has a sliding bolt (7) mounted at each end and connected to a central lock. The length of the bar corresponds to the internal width of the window frame and is secured by inserting the bolts in holes in the frame side members. The bolts are then locked in this position with a key (5).
