Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0161538A2] 1. Container for the individually apportioned dispensing of tablets (4), with two telescoping housing parts (2, 3), which complement each other to form the closed container and of which the one housing part (2), underneath a sorting trough (9) proportionately formed by both housing parts, constitutes a discharge chamber (8), the discharge opening (16) of which is closed in the relaxed spring position of a wall section (3') of the other housing part (3), which latter has a compartment finger (17) which, in the pushed-together position of the two housing parts, closes the sorting trough from the discharge chamber, characterized in that the two housing parts (2, 3) are designed at the operator's end in such a way that the closed circumference lying transversely to the sliding direction (y) is made up of two mutually adjoining wall sections (a, b) of the one housing part (2) and two complementing wall sections (c, d) of the other housing part (3).
