Abstract (en)
An improved slipper, essentially characterised in that the integrant part of the sole (1) is made of two equal laminar pieces (5,6) of textile material, between which at least a third piece (7) obtained from a layer having a conformation similar to that of above mentioned pieces is included, which layer is of a soft spongy material, in that the said three pieces (5,6,7) are associated together forming a whole, with or without the help of a tape joining and covering their edges and acting as a welt (11), in that the integrant part of the top (2) of the slipper presents a similar structure as the sole, with corresponding textile laminar pieces (8,9) and intermediate layer (10) of spongy material, in that in the edges of the sole and toe areas, the tape forming the welt (11) simultaneously makes the junction with the corresponding edges of the top.
