Abstract (en)
Cigar case, particularly for cigars, that being essentially flat and parallelepipedic and fitted with a mouth (1) on one of its smaller sides, it is fitted at the mentioned mouth with a longitudinal cavity (2) whose section is similar to that on an oblong, hollow bodycover (3) and capable of being put laterally into the mentioned cavity with the aim of sealing tightly the mouth of the cigar case, with the width of the mouth less than the maximum lateral width of the cavity, with the mentioned body-cover being made up of two halves (4,5) which telescope together and the mentioned hollow body-cover being adapted to house in a removable manner some moistening means (6), whose moistening action is exercised inside the cigar case thanks to at least one opening made in the body-cover. The moistening means are made up of an oblong body (8) of an absorbent material, capable of being moistened by the user and returned by the body-cover, preferably housed in a rigid, perforated wrapping (9).
