Abstract (en)
The ball ejector is an apparatus which permits golf balls to be teed by means of a simple and brief manoeuvre. It enables the balls to be struck at intervals of a few seconds, without substantial changes in posture. It consists of a store of balls, a ball ejector which operates with the aid of a lever actuated by the club (golf club), and a ball guide consisting of 2 different arms enabling the ball to be struck with all types of club. Because of its general structure, this apparatus requires no special work in order to be installed. <IMAGE>
