Abstract (en)
A device suitable for selectively securing parking places or passageways, which comprises barrier post (20) pivoted (24) at one end to an open-topped housing (12) on or in the surface so as to be pivotable between a prone, inoperative position inside said housing (12) and an erect, operative position in which it is braced against the housing (12) by an inclined brace (22); the brace (22) is, at its upper end, pivoted to the post (20), and movement of its lower end is controlled by slide guides (42) within the housing (12). A flap (44) pivoted (46) to the housing (12) closes the end thereof, containing said guides (42), and when lifted by the brace (22), raised into the operative position, a padlock can be engaged by registering openings (49, 49.1) in flap (44) and brace (22). Further, a key-locking-pin, spring-biased to engage suitable holes in the housing (12), or in the post (20), can be provided on the brace (22) to automatically lock the same in both the operative and inoperative positions.
