Abstract (en)
A double-faced knitted structure having on one or both faces a plurality of irregular puckers is produced by knitting on a knitting machine having a pair of opposed needle beds. At least two ends of non-contractible yarns are knitted on said needle beds to produce at least two knitted courses and at least one end of a contractible yarn is laid-in between the faces of said double-faced knitted structure and is intermittently attached to the knitted structure along the length of said two courses.
