Abstract (en)

A wrapping for plants or flowers placed in a potlike container (1), comprising a two-end open tubular element (8), one of the end regions of which is provided with means adapted to engage a potlike container to be received. Said means comprise at least one groove (11) extending along at least a part of the circumference of the tubular element and being bounded on either side by an inward bulge (9) defining a free passage smaller than that of an adjoining portion of the tubular element. Said tubular element is made from a resilient material having natural rigidity and preferably a circular cross section.
