Abstract (en)
[origin: WO8706104A1] The smoking of tobacco products such as cigarettes results in the production of carcinogenic compounds formed from nitrogen and carbon. The addition of small quantities of zinc oxide or ferric oxide to the tobacco reduces or eliminates these carcinogenic compounds and also has the advantage of removing the stale "after taste" associated with cigarettes.

Abstract (fr)
La consommation des produits du tabac, tels que les cigarettes, engendre des composés carcinogènes constitués d'azote et de carbone. L'addition de petites quantités d'oxyde de zinc et d'oxyde ferrique au tabac permet de réduire ou d'éliminer ces composés carcinogènes et présente aussi l'avantage d'éliminer "l'après-goût" vicié associé aux cigarettes.
