Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0305682A2] In the knitwear, there is at least one knitwear region limited by a tension yarn (11) which is so tied by catch hooks into individual stitches of the adjacent knitwear that its two ends are located on the same edge side of the limited knitwear region. By a pull on the ends of the tension yarn (11), the edge of the knitwear region limited by the tension yarn is drawn together, and the knitwear region is thereby curved out of the knitwear plane as a whole or in a manner divided into individual portions. <IMAGE>
