Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0331220A1] Known door closures for household appliances or the like have a closing shackle and a detent member which can be connected alternately to a housing part or to a door and which engage in one another in a closed position. The closing shackle can be fastened by means of a screw connection which increases the outlay in terms of production and assembly. It is to be possible to produce and assemble the new door closure in a simplified way. The closing shackle (1, 30) has a fastening portion (8) for a plug connection with the housing part (3) or the door (15). The door closure can be used in a simple way in household appliances, such as dishwashers, washing machines and other appliances.
