Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0331542A2] A device (1) having unclosed vents (8) and containing a detergent is used, this device is placed, together with the laundry to be washed, in the drum of the machine, and the machine is started, the washing cycle being allowed to proceed. The method is characterised more particularly in that a detergent composition, some constituents of which are separated, is used, in that at least one of said constituents is introduced into the device, and in that at least one other (12) of said constituents is separately associated with said device, so that, during the washing, all the constituents diffuse into the laundry and the washing bath. <IMAGE>
