Abstract (en)

Heat-dissipating light fixture apparatus (10) comprising: a hollow, heat conductive body (26); electrical connector means (86), disposed within the interior of said body and being operatively connectable to the base portion (22) of a lamp (12) having a reflector portion (18), for transmitting electrical power from a source thereof to said lamp; heat shield means (117), connected to the interior of said body and being interposable between said electrical connector means and the reflector portion of a lamp whose base portion is operatively connected to said electrical connector means, for intercepting radiant heat generated by said reflector portion toward said electrical connector means, and for conducting the intercepted radiant heat to said body; and heat conducting means (100), interposable between said heat shield means and said base portion of said lamp, for defining a conductive heat flow path between said base portion of said lamp and said heat shield means.
