Abstract (en)
[origin: WO8906509A1] A cover (1), in particular a bed-cover, comprises a preferably rectangular case and a loose filling. The cover can be used both in summer and in winter and the points at which the heat escapes can be turned to account. To this end, the case can be ruched perpendicular to the direction of the quilting seams so that the surface of the case can be reduced and subsequently increased. The ruching can be obtained by means of narrow ribbons (5), a drawn thread (8) for example in the form of heading tape for net curtaining (7), press-studs (6), adhesive tapes, hooks and eyes, or similar, arranged on the case.
