Abstract (en)
[origin: WO9003463A1] A slider needle for knitting machines has a needle body (1) with a hook (2), a slider (3) arranged to move in the needle body (1) and a swinging member articulated on the needle body (1) behind the hook (2). To avoid excessive travel when forming a stitch and to ensure the separation between the old stitch and the strand newly fed in, there is a spring (10) in the needle body which causes the swinging member (4) to move away from the hook (2) so that one lateral edge (7) of the swinging member (4) is almost vertical.
