Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0363625A2] A fence post has an extension arm (1) movably fixed thereto, the deviation of which from its predetermined normal position serves to trigger a signal. At the bottom end of the extension arm (1), a switch (6) or the like is arranged inside the fence-post tube (2), the actuating element (7) of which switch (6) bears against a fixed area of the fence post. The extension arm (1) is held in its normal position by at least one spring element (13; 14) and can be displaced while overcoming its spring force while a signal is transmitted by the switch (6). <IMAGE>
