Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0379387A1] A carpet loom of the gripper-jacquard Axminster type includes a shogging mechanism (21) to shog the grippers (3) and/or the yarn carriers (1) transversely between successive picks of pile yarn. By shogging the grippers (1) transversely between successive picks of pile yarn a different gripper is used in each course for successive picks. Equally, when the yarn carriers (1) are shogged the pile yarns that form each course are not taken from the same yarn carrier (1). Thus, any fault on the grippers (1) or in the yarn in one carrier (1) will not result in a fault on a single course throughout the entire carpet but will, instead, be dispersed between a number of different courses.
