Abstract (en)
[origin: WO8903644A1] A sports shoe, in particular a ski boot, comprises a shell (2) having a sole (1), and a two-piece upper (3, 4) which is hinged to the shell (2), both in the region of the inner ankle and in the region of the outer ankle, by means of two hinges (5). The hinges have a pivot pin (6) arranged in an insert element (7) of the shell (2). A threaded rod (9) is screwed into a threaded bore (8) in the pivot pin (6). Said rod is rotatably mounted on a support element (10) connected to the shaft but is unable to slide in the axial direction of the threaded rod, and is connected to a flexible shaft (12). The flexible shafts (12) of both hinges (5) can be counterrotated simultaneously by means of an adjusting device (14) comprising a rotary adjusting wheel (17).
