Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0415435A2] For making simulated stone blocks, casting moulds (1) are used which consist of polyurethane and are fastened on a common baseplate (10) in a grid-like arrangement with a spacing (15) from one another. A frame grid (14) holds the casting moulds (1) during filling. For removal from the mould, the frame grid (14) is lifted off and the baseplate (10) bearing the casting moulds (1) is turned in lateral swivel joints (13) or upside down through 180 DEG , so that the simulated blocks produced drop out of the flexibly opening casting moulds (1). <IMAGE>
