Abstract (en)
An adjustable sill is provided for attachment in use to a frame member (10). The sill comprises an elongate sill member (12) having a plurality of adjustment members (14) captive therein. In use, the adjustment members co-operate with the frame (10), for example via nut members (15). The adjustment members (14) are spaced apart along the length of the sill member (12) so that local adjustment to the height of the sill can be made along the length of the sill, to provide a flush fit with the door member, window member or the like.
