Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0437005A1] In a daisy wheel for typewriters or the like, a plurality of catch projections (7) arranged at the ends of extension arms (8,11) serve for retaining the hub (1) of the daisy wheel on a driveshaft. Seen in the axial direction of the daisy wheel, the backs (9) of the extension arms have a spacing from the inside wall (10) of a central hole (2) for accommodating the drive shaft. The gap caused by the spacing maintained allows the daisy wheel to be produced economically. <IMAGE>
