Abstract (en)

The invention relates to a container (1) for drinks, of the type provided with a removable element (2) for causing the "pop-opening" of the container (1), and having a drinking-straw (5) housed inside the container itself and associated with said removable element through an appropriate fastening means (6). In this manner when the removable element (2) is torn up causing the container to be opened, the straw (5) comes out of said container (1) and, by separating it from the removable element (2), can be used for drinking the liquid held in the container (1). <IMAGE>
