Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0445416A2] 2.1. In old buildings to be renovated, it is necessary for a closet having a horizontal discharge connection to be connected to a vertically extending soil pipe. The object of the invention is to make possible, in the course of renovation of a toilet room, adaptation to different distances of the fixed soil pipes from the walls in a particularly simple manner without the need for parts designed especially for the particular distance. 2.2. According to the invention, the connection is solved by an S-shaped elbow-connector (14) which essentially consists of a horizontal inlet pipe piece (16) capable of being shortened, a (lacuna) which can be connected to a soil pipe (13) and (lacuna) perpendicularly to the inlet pipe piece (16) which can be connected to the discharge connection (12) of the closet (10), and an arcuate middle piece (18) lying between the inlet and the outlet pipe piece (16, 17). 2.3. The elbow-connector according to the invention is particularly suitable for wash-down closets.
