Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0447795A1] The invention is based on a string instrument, in particular a bass guitar or electric guitar, which has in its body a compartment (3) for holding the components (8) of an electrical sound pick-off and, if required, amplification, the compartment being accessible via a cover (7) which is fitted detachably on the rear side of the body. In order that the attachment and detachment of the cover can be carried out more quickly and easily, the cover being held securely in the closed position, to be precise even when the instrument is being used, it is provided that a frame (6) is attached to the side wall (11) of the compartment (3), that the cover (7) is constructed such that it fits onto or into this frame, and that catches are provided between the frame and cover for the cover to be attached to and detached from the frame. <IMAGE>
