Abstract (en)

The present invention presents a connective knitting method of belt-shaped knit ends capable of joining the end portions nearly simultaneously when knitting a belt or rope and a belt-shaped knit fabric having the end portions linked in knit state, which comprises two pieces of belt-shaped knit fabric knitted by an arbitrary number of needles in different ranges across the boundary in the longitudinal direction of the needle beds (I,II) disposed at least in a pair of front and rear sides, wherein symmetrical loops of the final course of both knit fabrics across the boundary are overlaid and knitted by binding off. <IMAGE>
