Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0469223A1] The seating unit consists of a seat surface (2) and a backrest (3) which both consist of individual elements (13) which are supported by a frame. Each element (13) consists of two shells (14). In a preferred embodiment, the two shells are identical and each shell has longitudinal ribs (16) which are rounded at the top. In order to guarantee improved discharge of rainwater, the gaps (18) between the ribs are of varying depth and are provided at the lowest points with discharge openings (19, 22). The above construction allows economic manufacture and a robust construction of seating units for the open air which can additionally be used again quickly after a shower of rain. <IMAGE>
