Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0479263A1] In order, in a construction, especially a dwelling or holiday house, to be able to cast the walls and the intermediate floor situated above in one step from concrete without having to attach a separate ceiling form after erection of the walls, it is proposed to use for each room of the construction a room form consisting of a plurality of assembled form elements (4) which bound the room and of an inflatable balloon envelope (5) which is arranged in this room. After inflating the balloon envelope, the latter completely fills the room surrounded by the form elements (4) and covers it in the manner of a dome. If a formwork erected in this way is filled with concrete, the wall surfaces of the rooms are defined by the form elements (4), whereas the ceiling surface is formed by the dome-like balloon envelope. The external form elements (1) are for this purpose at least as high as the storey height plus the thickness of the intermediate floor. <IMAGE>
