Abstract (en)
The invention relates to a holder for candles provided with supporting means (11) and with two holding means (15,16) connected thereto. Said holding means each define an opening (17,18) and are movable against spring force with respect to each other, from a first position, in which the openings (17,18) in the two holding means are at least substantially located side by side, when seen in plan view, towards a second position, in which the openings (17,18) are at least partially located one above the other, when seen in plan view. In this second position the openings form a passage through which a candle (21) or the like can be passed. The candle (21) is then held by the clamping force exerted on the candle by the holding means (15,16). <IMAGE>
