Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0484683A1] A shoe with an initially low upper is characterised in that the collar (13) comprises, on either side of its zone of articulation straddling the top of the upper (10), its own elastic locking means which are capable of rendering it manually detachable and consist, respectively, of a buttonhole (50, 60, 70, 80), of which at least a part (51c, 51d-62, 63-72-83) is elastically deformable outside of its plane, in order to permit its engagement by deformation over the head (19a) of a stud (19) forming a button integral with the heel stiffener (12), its shape according to an initial plane then being reassumed behind the said head (19a) of stud (19), of which the dimensions are greater than those of the buttonhole (50, 60, 70 80). Application to sports shoes. <IMAGE>
