Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0487489A1] A shutter hinge having a cone (1) mountable on the frame and a hinge part (5) mountable on the wing and carrying the hinge sleeve (4) comprises a shutter-locking device which allows a rotary position between the cone (1) and hinge sleeve (4) to be locked. To vary the position of the opened wing occurring during locking, the relative position of the locking device in relation to the cone (1) or to the hinge part (5) located on the shutter is, or the mutually opposite positive-connection parts of the locking device are, adjustable relative to one another. One version provides the adjustability of a catch nose (9) of the positive connection and another version provides a variable rotatability, adjustable via a setscrew (15), of the hinge part (5) located on the shutter in relation to the positive connection. <IMAGE>
