Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0499795A1] What is described is a key collar (1) with a closed locking ring (2), which serves as an abutment of at least one bolt, especially of a latch of a door or flap lock and which supports forces acting on the bolt transversely relative to the axial direction of the locking ring, and which, according to the invention, has a movable part of the locking ring which is supported disengagably in its position keeping the locking ring (2) closed, so that, after the disengagement of its support, an opening of the locking ring (2) and a removal of the bolt (1) from the latter transversely to its axial direction are possible without actuation of the bolt (1) itself. <IMAGE>
