Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0513435A1] In the case of a method of constructing edifices and buildings, in particular two-storey to three-storey residential blocks, it is proposed to centre the individual prefabricated modules dimensionally accurately one above the other and to align them horizontally by a plug-in type of construction, a respectively lower module being fitted by the same plug-in type of construction onto a likewise prefabricated peripheral foundation frame. For connecting adjacent modules in the region of their floor slab, the latter have central depressions with peripheral marginal edges, in which there are transverse passages which receive tubes which are inserted through and serve for fixing. <IMAGE>
