Abstract (en)
[origin: WO9114147A1] A darts target (8) for a game of darts has mobile segments (11) marked with different scores and provided with holes for receiving the darts and is articulated inside a front door (3) of a housing (2). When a dart strikes the segments (11), which are prevented from moving forward by retaining devices, the segments actuate a switch matrix (13) which is arranged on a supporting disk (15) and which automatically registers, totals and displays the scores by means of a switching system. The front door (3) is articulated to the housing (2) on one of its vertical longitudinal sides (5) by a hinge (4). The supporting disk (15) with the switch matrix (13) is fastened to the rear face of the front door (3) so that it can be folded back.
