Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0526184A1] Articles (A), such as small plastic bottles, or six packs consisting of such bottles, are moved by line pressure down an inclined ramp (34) into a load station (40) where plastic trays (C min) are continuously filled with these articles. The trays are indexed by a flight bar conveyor (50) that raises each tray, to be in position to index the next tray, and driven separator discs (60) above the articles have lugs (62) that move between selected article rows to index groups of the articles as they are loaded into the tray. <IMAGE>
