Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0552755A2] Method for introducing liquids into masonry work via bores, using bottles, the opening of which is inclined obliquely downwards and is provided with a small outlet tube which is pushed into the bore. At least in the region of its outlet opening, the small outlet tube is surrounded by a sheath consisting of a liquid-absorbing material. The invention further relates to a bottle which can be used for this method.
