Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0580516A1] The invention relates to a method for packaging a solid substance in the divided state. It applies, in particular, to the packaging of cut glass fibres. According to the invention, this method gives rise to a packaging permitting the transportation of this substance without the addition of a supplementary element acting as an interface between the package and the transporter. The invention also proposes a container permitting the transportation of this type of substance without a supplementary element. <IMAGE>
