Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0612481A2] 2.1. For high-performance packaging machines, a correspondingly large stock of cigarettes must be kept ready. A container magazine (11) serves for receiving a multiplicity of containers (11) combined to form storage units (18). Each container receives a relatively large number of cigarettes. Filling takes place via a bottom wall (17). Within the container magazine (11), the storage units (18) can be moved up and down and transversely. 2.2. The containers (12) are also designed in a special way, in order to guarantee fault-free filling and emptying. <IMAGE>
