Abstract (en)

[origin: EP0623717A2] A hole (1) is dug and the plant (2) laid into it before it is filled around by earth (4) and ash (5). Ashes are first filled into the hole around the roots, human ashes are used. The plant may be a bush or a tree. The hole may be filled in layers of earth and ash. Rod or tube shaped structures (8) may be buried into the ground near the root area (6) in order to pour in the ashes. Further ashes may be added at a later date through the tubes.
