Abstract (en)
[origin: EP0626147A2] An article support has a support part (2) and a clamping part (3), by means of which the article support (1) can be attached to a perforated wall and which is connected to the support part (2) by a joint (8). In order to establish in a simple way a better connection between support part (2), clamping part (3) and perforated wall, the clamping part (3) has an intermediate lug which projects from the main plane of the clamping part (3), the length of which is slightly greater than the distance between two wires of the support part (2) running parallel to one another and which, when the clamping part (3) is pivoted into the clamping position, penetrates between the mutually parallel wires. <IMAGE>
